TURKISH ECONOMY RETURNS BACK TO NORMAL

UTG Transport (Istanbul, Turkey) reports that Turkish economy has returned back to normal and economic institutions are now regularly and efficiently operates.

Last July 15, 2016, the country witnessed a military coup attempt to overthrow the democratically elected government and suspend the constitutional order by a faction of the Turkish Armed Forces in various cities of Turkey, particularly in Istanbul and Ankara which are the political and economic centers of the country.

This coup attempt is thwarted by the Turkish nation through their manifestation of historic solidarity and their will to protect democratic institutions and values. Thanks to the precautions taken by the governmental bodies, we are glad to observe and declare that Turkish economy and economic institutions are operating regularly and efficiently. Massive infrastructure investment projects continue to be in process.

Exports are being promoted by the government and in addition to these efforts, significantly extensive foreign trade measures are being planned. These initiatives are going to flourish logistics and freight forwarding activities in the country

Currently, banking services and commerce are also being carried out without any difficulty and delay, and money transfers are conducted as a part of daily business routines as well.
